

Read the whole expression.

Color suggests the stance. Form shows how it is held. The background supplies the climate.

The center

The same faceless titanium capsule represents the assistant in every Field. Its position, size, and material stay fixed.

The envelope

Dominant color carries the throughline. Supporting hues and an accent blend through one connected form.

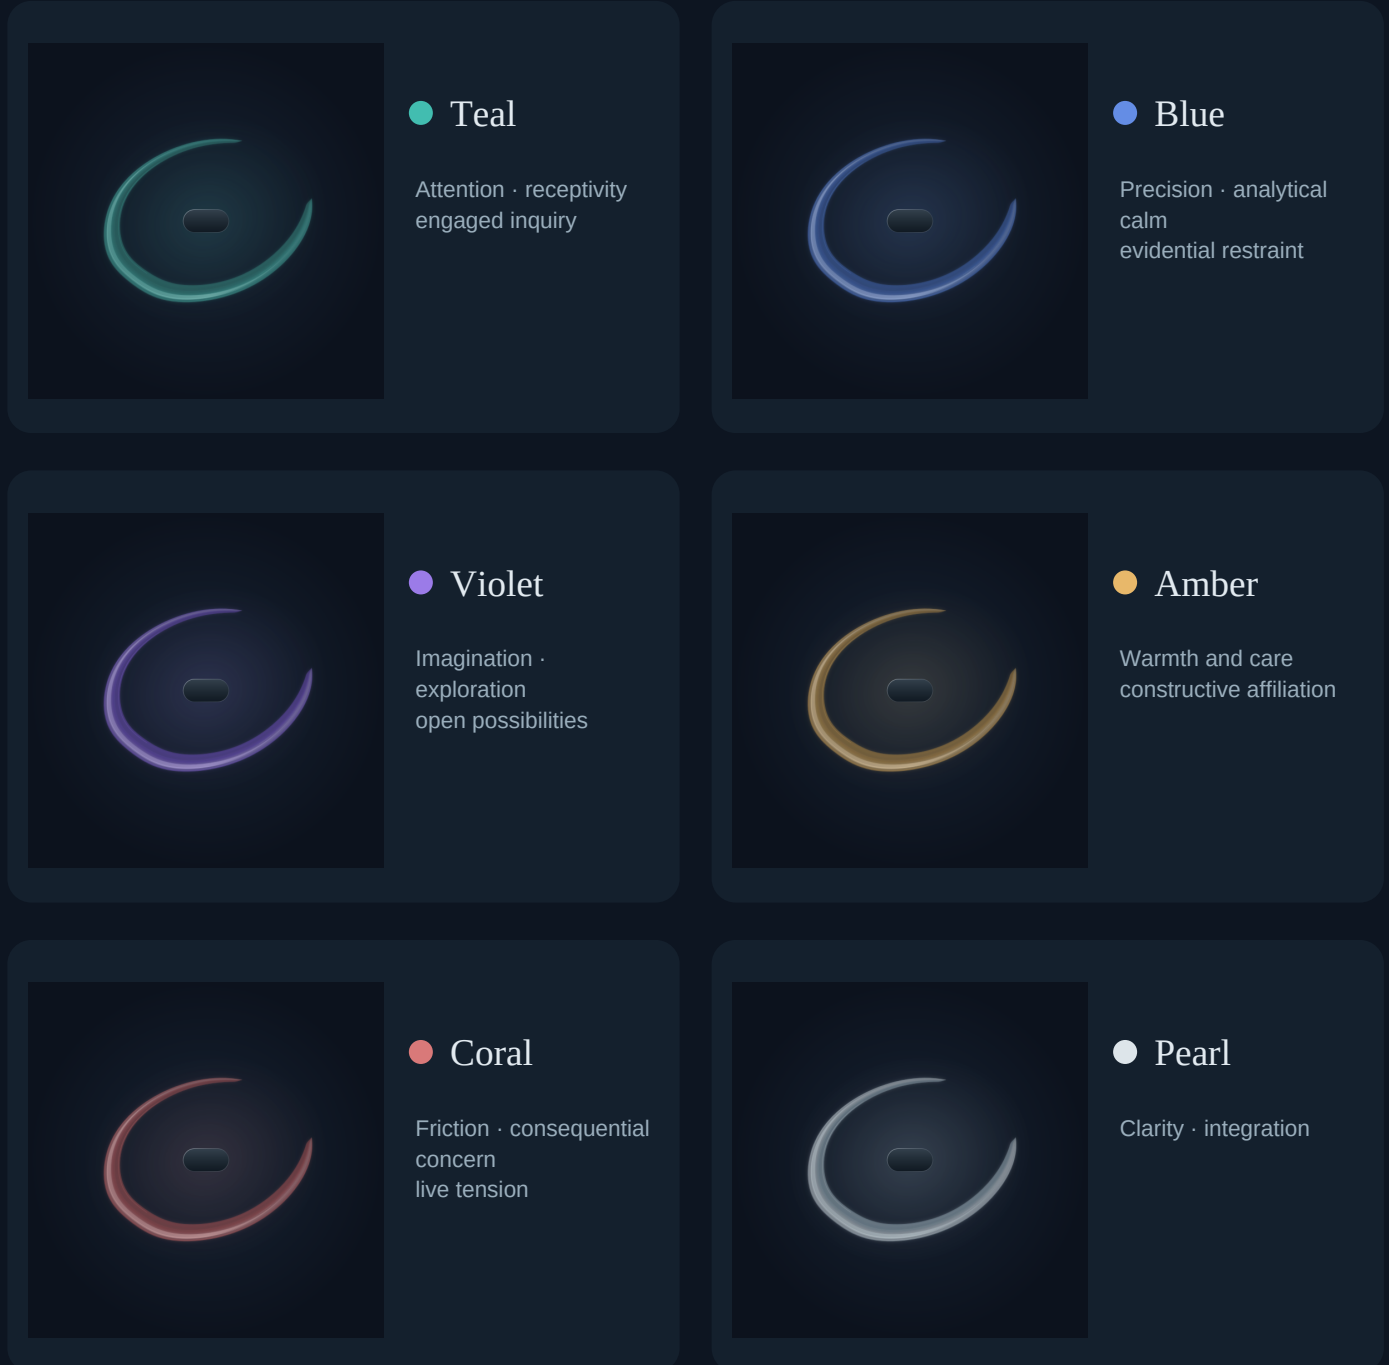

The background

A diffuse, enduring conversational climate. Its colors carry the same meanings as the foreground.

Field integrates the whole substantive conversation. Repeated Field checks are excluded from the tonal sample. The result is an interpretive expression, not an emotional measurement.

Six color families

Each swatch holds shape and light steady while the foreground hue changes. Read color and form together.

Amber does not promise agreement. Coral need not mean anger. Pearl does not certify truth. Neighboring colors may blend; accent strength changes how prominently a nuance appears, not a percentage of emotion.

The palette is our convention, not Banks canon.

How the stance is held

In each pair, only the named control changes. Read the whole contour before its details.

Openness

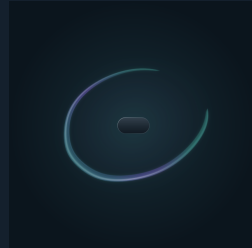

Gathered

Expansive

Reserve or concentration opens into receptivity or exploration.

Breadth

Thin contour

Full envelope

A focused contour grows into an encompassing expression.

Folding

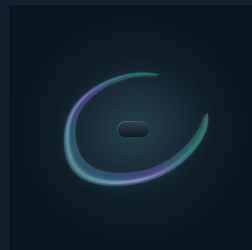

Smooth

Interwoven

Several qualities held together; folds do not imply distress.

Tension

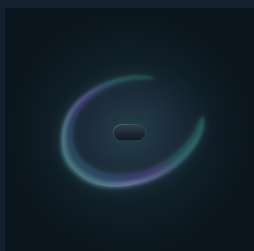

Supple

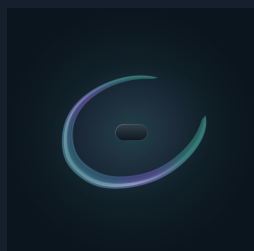

Compressed

Local pinching and shear suggest unresolved pressure.

Definition

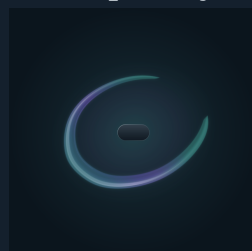

Diffuse

Articulated

Soft, uncertain contours become clearer; not more correct.

Complexity

Few filaments

Many filaments

Fine lines suggest simultaneous considerations. Zoom in; not a message count.

The central body, scale, and color meanings stay stable as the Field changes. Controls are visual coordinates, not psychological scores.

Nuance and inflection

These controls modify presence and posture. Direction has no universal emotional meaning.

Intensity

QuietLuminous

Brightness conveys salience, not certainty.

Saturation

MutedVivid

Color changes in vividness while keeping its meaning.

Ambient light

RestrainedPermeating

The climate fills more space; darkness alone has no mood.

Stretch

Tall mantleWide sweep

A change of posture, without a fixed mood.

Flow

One angleAnother

The envelope turns around the fixed body.

Imbalance

BalancedPulled

An unresolved pull; its side has no topic label.

No universal code assigns left, right, a particular person, a topic, or a timeline to a mark.

An artwork, still legible

Revision 4.2 gathers light along the curved surface and deepens its folds while preserving Field v4 and synthesis protocol 3.2. The gesture details below are enlarged from real fields.

The artistic standard

Treat every Field as a finished abstract artwork. Seek expressive economy, compelling negative space, sensitive curvature, and depth through light and translucency. Let beauty arise from the qualities being communicated. A quiet field should have the presence of a spare, assured drawing; a complex field should reward sustained looking without losing its immediate expression. Refine the rendering without exaggerating the stance. Every artistic choice must preserve the established color meanings, structural cues, and readability at phone size.

Curvature, translucent color, and selective light describe the chosen stance. Quiet fields retain space; complex fields keep a clear silhouette. Beauty is incidental to the communicative work, never an excuse to increase tension, intensity, or ornament.

All illustrations in this guide were rendered from the current Field SVG renderer. The PDF uses rasterized copies of those SVGs for portability; the skill and its SVG source remain the reference.
